

More DPSS Movie Narration

People today want more out of a job than just good pay and great benefits; they want that and more. They want a job where they're treated like professionals. They want a job with a positive work environment and the freedom to make professional decisions. They want opportunities for career advancement and a chance to grow as professionals. But most of all, they want to know that they're making a difference.

What great difference could anyone hope to make than helping a child find safety and happiness? Every day the professionals at Riverside County DPSS Children's Services do just that.

I chose Riverside County out of graduate school after receiving my master in social work degree, and I chose Riverside County partly because I had done my internship here and was made to feel very welcome.

I really believe that public child welfare services, and specifically Riverside County CPS, is an excellent starting point for someone just graduating with their bachelor's degree. I started in public child welfare with my bachelor's degree, and it, it's such a wide field and it gives you such a wide variety of experiences that once you have this experience you can take that to any other social service agency, in any setting, and your experience is going to apply.

The people part of the job is why I've gotten into social work, and why I'm in Child Protective Services, so I do enjoy when I get a chance to go out and see families and see kids.

People that I went to school with that were interning with Riverside County, they were like, you know, it's just very, very positive, I mean it was almost like I was amazed, and I'm, I'm being very honest when I say this, the people in my masters class that did intern with Riverside County, were, just had glowing reviews.
